

Clare Menck | Mirrored

Reflections in water are the common denominator that weaves a transient connection between the works of 'Mirrored' by Clare Menck. In these paintings, figures are portrayed wading, exploring and often contemplating, and in keeping with Menck's body of work - they exist in or near water.

Menck's familiar painterly voice is seen in the abstractions that occur when water distorts everything above the waterline. Sometimes, Menck's water is still as glass and at other times, the disturbance of its surface results in fascinating visual echoes of the reflected human figures. In a deeper resonance of the theme, these works act as a reflection of the artist's inner world as she witnesses, captures and 'mirrors' specially chosen moments of her life in paint.
